

Asylum sought to escape from NZ government's human rights abuse

30 October, 2017, Wellington, NZ

Attempting to escape from ongoing abuse at the hands of the New Zealand government, CIA and Clinton whistleblower, Harmon Wilfred and his Canadian wife, Carolyn Dare Wilfred, are petitioning foreign embassies in Wellington for political asylum.

The couple entered NZ on a US and a Canadian business visa in 2001. In 2005, when Harmon's passport expired, the US consulate confiscated it and told him to return to Washington to collect a replacement. Fearing for his freedom and possibly his life, Harmon renounced his American citizenship and sought political asylum from the NZ government.

In 2006, his plea for asylum was rejected, apparently, because the NZ government did not wish to give offence to its powerful ally. Since then, Harmon has been living as a stateless person in New Zealand.

In 2011, immediately following a summit between John Key and Hillary Clinton, Harmon was issued with a deportation order. As he has no travel documents and no country to go to, Immigration New Zealand (INZ) cannot enforce its order. However, the existence of a deportation order against him makes it impossible for him to apply for residency, NZ citizenship, or otherwise regularise his status. The Ombudsman has been considering this case of bureaucratic entrapment for the past three years, but has yet to make a ruling.

In 2015, Carolyn Dare Wilfred, decided to forgo her business visa and apply for residency under Stephen Joyce's "Investor Plus" programme for foreigners wishing to invest $10 million or more in NZSMEs. She was falsely informed by INZ that applications under this programme could only be made from overseas. Having informed INZ of her intention to make her application from Canada, in September 2015, Carolyn left for a holiday with her daughter in Ontario, while her new residency application was being processed. Within 24 hours of her departure from the Christchurch airport, INZ placed an all-ports ban on her re-entry. When the Wilfred's lawyer protested, he was told that it was a bureaucratic error that would soon be rectified.

Since then it has become obvious that it was done with deliberate intent to coerce Harmon to leave the country illegally. Carolyn is currently living in Germany and is forbidden from visiting New Zealand. Meanwhile her husband, without travel documents and forbidden to take employment, is in effect imprisoned in New Zealand. In New Zealand prisons, even mass murderers would be allowed visits from family members. Harmon, who has committed no crime other than to blow the whistle on the crimes of others, is not. This loving couple, both in their sixties fear that they will never be able to meet again during their lifetimes.

Faced with no other choice, they have embarked on the task of finding another country which would be prepared to grant them asylum from the abuse of their human rights that the United States of America, Canada and now in collusion with New Zealand, continues to inflict on them. It seems a forlorn endeavour; why should a third country pick up New Zealand's neglected international obligations?

Below, is a sample of the letters requesting asylum sent to select foreign embassies in Wellington:

Re: Urgent Request for Political Asylum for Harmon Lynn Wilfred and Carolyn Dare Wilfred.

Your Excellency ...,

My name is Harmon Lynn Wilfred. I served in the United States Air Force (AF11687501) from 1969 to 1973 under a Top Secret security clearance. From 1996 to 2000, I was contracted as an asset of the Central Intelligence Agency ("CIA") under the Clinton administration. In 2000, I exposed illegal CIA covert operations to the US Justice Department involving the Clintons. Under constant CIA/Clinton threats and retributions, I escaped North America to New Zealand in 2001 with my Canadian wife, Carolyn Dare Wilfred. Today I am a stateless person, exiled in New Zealand with no right to work or travel. Carolyn currently resides with friends in Germany after being banned without notice from returning to New Zealand while on holiday in 2015.

We, Harmon and Carolyn Dare Wilfred hereby request political asylum from the Nation State of [REDACTED] due to the ongoing egregious violations of our human rights by the United States of America, Canada and New Zealand in collusion. These violations have been officially brought to the attention of the referenced nation states since 2001 and have not ceased. As a direct result, we now face the loss of our family, freedom and safety, including financial destitution as well as being forcibly separated since 5 September 2015 with no redress.

Documented evidence of these violations is hereby attached to this request in hard copy and/or by the included flash drive with live URL evidence links within the documents:
